Welcome

Good morning, and a warm welcome to this morning's concert. As a cellist, I am very much looking forward to this concert: a great cellist, conducted by a great cellist!

I'm personally looking forward to hearing our soloist Ivan Karizna's cello, a Tassini made in 1760 which was played by Paul Tortelier, and which I had the privilege of hearing many decades ago here in Brisbane in my formative years.

Dvořák's Cello Concerto is an epic monument and priceless gift to the repertoire. It is certainly my personal favourite as it has everything from symphonic power, youthful vigour and virtuosity, to warm nostalgia and heart-melting intimacy. The elegaic ending of the third movement is possibly the most beautiful thing you will ever hear.

Beethoven's 7th Symphony is quite a regular in our repertoire, and a joy to play. The second movement is particularly well known as it has been used in various movies. The opening of this movement is very poignant, haunting and sombre, akin to a funeral procession. As it builds, you will hear the cellos join with the violas to render the main theme on its way to a layered and progressive climax.

Thank you for joining us and enjoy the concert!

Artistic Summary

After this morning's concert, you'll be dancing out of the concert hall. This Czech-flavoured program has its roots in European folk dances, and the rhythmic patterns and intensity form a thread through both pieces.

In Dvořák's Cello Concerto, now one of the most often-performed in the repertoire, we hear a composer homesick for his native Bohemia. The last large-scale work from Dvořák's time in America before he returned home, it's more like a symphony with a solo cello than a traditional concerto. The melancholy second movement quotes a melody from one of Dvořák's own songs, a favourite of his sister-in-law who had recently died, while the last movement teems with statements and references to rustic European tunes. Dvořák was among the first generation of composers who had grown up speaking Czech, and quickly expanded on the fledgling Czech nationalist style. The composer had been recruited to the United States in the hope that he would inspire a new national tradition of American national music, as he had back home in Bohemia, but he was dissatisfied with the level of government support for the arts in the New World, and never fully felt at home there.

Beethoven's Seventh Symphony is also deeply rooted in folk traditions. Written at a time when the composer was working on arrangements on Scottish, Irish and Welsh folksongs for Edinburgh-based publisher George Thomson as a way to pay the bills, the piece's prominent rhythmic motifs inspired Wagner to describe it as "the apotheosis of the dance". Listen out for the jig-like rhythm in the flutes in the first movement, while the third movement may have been based on an Austrian pilgrim's hymn. The main theme of the finale, meanwhile, is pretty much drawn straight from Beethoven's arrangement of the Irish folksong Save me from the grave and wise, which he may well have been working on concurrently with the symphony.

ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK

(1841-1904)

CELLO CONCERTO IN B MINOR, OP.104

- I. Allegro
- II. Adagio ma non troppo
- III. Finale: Allegro moderato

Brahms was impressed. 'If only I'd known,' said the composer, Dvořák's longtime champion, 'that one could write a cello concerto like that, I'd have written one long ago!' Brahms' admiration aside, the composition of what Dvořák scholar John Clapham has called simply 'the greatest of all cello concertos' was no easy matter. In fact, it was his second attempt at the medium – the first was composed in 1865, but appears only to have been written out in a cello and piano score. That Dvořák left the work unorchestrated suggests that he was dissatisfied with this first effort. Despite the urgings of his friend, the cellist Hanuš Wihan, Dvořák thought no more about writing such a piece until many years later.

In New York in March 1894, whilst serving as director of the National Conservatory of Music, Dvořák attended a performance by Victor Herbert of his Second Cello Concerto. This made a huge impact on Dvořák, who re-examined the idea of such a work for Wihan. The concerto was sketched between 8 November 1894 and New Year's Day, and Dvořák completed the full score early in February.

Much to Dvořák's annoyance, the first performance of the concerto was not given by its dedicatee, Wihan. The London Philharmonic Society, who premiered it at the Queen's Hall in March 1896, mistakenly believed Wihan to be unavailable, and engaged Leo Stern.

Despite Dvořák's embarrassment, Stern must have delivered the goods, as Dvořák engaged him for the subsequent New York, Prague and Vienna premieres of the work. Wihan did, however, perform the work often, and insisted on making some 'improvements' to Dvořák's score so that the cello part would be more virtuosic. Wihan also insisted on interpolating a cadenza in the third movement, which the composer vehemently opposed. (Only a stiff letter from Dvořák persuaded his publisher, Simrock, to leave out the cadenza.)

Despite being an 'American' work, the concerto is much more a reflection of Dvořák's nostalgia for his native Bohemia, and perhaps for the composer's father who died in 1894. It is full of some of Dvořák's most inspired moments, such as the heroic first theme in the first movement, and the complementary melody for horn which adds immeasurably to its Romantic ambience.

The Bohemian connection became more personal when Dvořák, working on the piece in December 1894, heard that his sister-in-law Josefina (with whom he had been in love during their youth) was seriously ill. Dvořák was sketching the slow movement at the time. The outer sections of this movement are calm and serene, but Dvořák expresses his distress in an impassioned gesture that ushers in an emotionally unstable central section, based on his song Kéž duch můj sám (Leave me alone) which was one of Josefina's favourites.

Josefina died in the spring of 1895, and Dvořák, by this time back in Bohemia, made significant alterations to the concluding coda of the third movement, adding some 60 bars of music.

These additions, and his determination not to diffuse its emotional power with a cadenza, allowed Dvořák, as scholar Robert Battey notes, to revisit 'not only the first movement's main theme, but also a hidden reference to Josefina's song in the slow movement. Thus, the concerto becomes something of a shrine, or memorial.'

Dvořák was the first Bohemian (now part of Czechia) composer to achieve worldwide recognition, noted for turning folk material into the language of 19th-century Romantic music. Dvořák's popularity lies in his great talent for melody and in the delightfully fresh Czech character of his music, which offered a welcome contrast to the heavier fare of some of his contemporaries. Dvořák's legacy includes nine symphonies, an opera (Rusalka), a cello concerto and a wealth of choral and chamber music.

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

(1770-1827)

SYMPHONY NO.7 IN A, OP.92

- I. Poco sostenuto – Vivace
- II. Allegretto
- III. Presto
- IV. Allegro con brio

Beethoven's early listeners couldn't get enough of the Allegretto from Symphony No. 7.

The patriotic work was premiered in 1813 at a Vienna charity concert honouring soldiers wounded in the Battle of Hanau. Maestro Beethoven waved his baton, and exhilarated audiences called for an encore of the second movement. Play it again, Ludwig!

There was sustained demand for this movement throughout the century – so much so that it was programmed into performances of his other symphonies, too. Fanatic listeners applauded between movements.

It's easy to get technical about why the Allegretto is so brilliant – the dactyl (the insistent long-short-short rhythm) and spondee (long-long) build in intensity as they're shared between instrumental sections; a grave and majestic theme that at last succumbs to the inevitable human instinct of hope. But should we really worry about dactyls and spondees? The point is to enjoy the masterpiece with the same explosive joy as Beethoven, who'd considered this symphony his best.

Rousing Allegretto aside, the Seventh is an exceedingly jubilant example of a symphony composed in a major key. The Poco sostenuto is spacious enough to allow active listening of its ascending scales: each iteration develops with a different mood. The Presto gallops along before arriving at a trio, which recalls an Austrian pilgrim's gentle hymn (later, composer Hector Berlioz would compare this very musical moment to "the spirit of landscape painting and the idyll").

The ecstatic and vigorous final movement is especially remarkable when we remember Beethoven wasn't in the best of health. He'd worked on the composition while visiting Teplice – a Bohemian spa town to which his doctor sent him for various ailments. His hearing was also failing, yet he was so elated by the Seventh that he was observed jumping up and down on the podium.

Our collective love for the Seventh hasn't diminished. Its standalone treasure, the Allegretto, has been handpicked for film soundtracks including The King's Speech and Mr Holland's Opus. And in the concert hall, the music feels just as alive as it did in the 19th Century.

Stephanie Eslake © 2021

Beethoven's music is often hailed as a musical period entirely of its own, pointing the way from the high Classical towards Romanticism. His music responds to changing philosophies of the early nineteenth century: a new humanism and incipient nationalism, as well as a concern for individual and personal freedom. Famously continuing to compose throughout his life despite increasing hearing loss, Beethoven was a considerable innovator, widening the scope of sonata, symphony, concerto and quartet forms, and blending choral and orchestral elements in his ninth symphony in a way never before attempted. Alongside Bach and Mozart, Beethoven is widely regarded as one of the greatest composers who ever lived.

UMBERTO CLERICI

CONDUCTOR

After a career spanning more than 20 years as a gifted cello soloist and orchestral musician, Umberto Clerici has consolidated his diverse artistic achievements to rapid acclaim as a conductor. Since 2023 he has been the Chief Conductor of the Queensland Symphony Orchestra.

It was in Sydney in 2018 that Clerici made his conducting debut with the Sydney Symphony Orchestra at the Sydney Opera House. Following a swift trajectory of prestigious conducting engagements, he is now in high demand in the southern hemisphere and Europe.

In addition to his busy schedule with the Queensland Symphony, other recent and future engagements include the Volksoper Wien with Steven Isserlis, New Zealand Symphony with Daniil Trifonov, debuts with Orchestra del Teatro Massimo in Palermo, Orchestre de l'Opéra de Rouen and Orchestra Regionale Toscana. Clerici continues a special relationship with the Sydney Symphony, and will return in 2026 to the Opera House with a programme featuring Bryce Dessner and Dvořák. Each season also sees Clerici conducting on the podiums of Melbourne and West Australian Symphony Orchestras.

In the operatic sphere, Clerici recently enjoyed his second collaboration with Opera Queensland (Puccini's La bohème) and he will make his opera debut with the Volksoper Vienna with Bizet's Carmen.

IVAN KARIZNA

CELLO

Ivan Karizna is a storyteller with an exceptional gift of musical expression, known equally for his poetic interpretations and powerful stage presence. Described by András Schiff as 'one of the best cellists of his generation', he has won numerous awards, including at the Tchaikovsky and Queen Elisabeth Competitions.

In 2025–26 Karizna returns to the Netherlands Philharmonic to give the Dutch premiere of Thomas Larcher's Cello Concerto under Dmitri Slobodeniouk at the Concertgebouw and makes his debut with Netherlands Radio Philharmonic to perform the Brahms Double Concerto. He tours Australia, performing with Sydney, Adelaide, Queensland and West Australian Symphony Orchestras whilst other appearances include with Residentie Orkest, Kuopio Symphony, and BBC National Orchestra of Wales.

Karizna is an avid chamber musician and has collaborated with numerous distinguished artists, including Joseph Swensen and Alan Gilbert as part of La Jolla Chamber Music Festival. This season he joins colleagues in Amsterdam's Muziekgebouw and Utrecht's TivoliVredenburg, as well as at UKARIA in the Adelaide Hills and returns to Elena Bashkirova's Jerusalem Chamber Music Festival. Past chamber collaborations include with Gidon Kremer, András Schiff, Renaud Capuçon and Christian Tetzlaff.

Karizna plays the 1760 Tassini cello previously owned by Paul Tortelier, on generous loan from a member of the Stretton Society. He is a French citizen, dividing his time between Paris and Amsterdam.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Queensland Performing Arts Trust is a statutory body of the State of Queensland and is partially funded by the Queensland Government through Arts Queensland.

The Honourable John-Paul Langbroek MP
Minister for Education and the Arts

Sharon Schimming
Director-General, Department of Education

Queensland Performing Arts Centre (QPAC) rests on the lands of the Yuggera and Turrbal peoples. We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of this country and recognise their rich cultural heritage and enduring connection to the land, waters and skies. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples are this country's original storytellers, and it is our privilege to continue to share stories and be a place of gathering on this land that has been a meeting place for millennia.

Thank you to all our donors for their generous support of the QPAC Foundation, which enables us to reach beyond the stage and bring a sense of belonging, community engagement, and joy to all Queenslanders.

We give heartfelt thanks to QPAC's Principal Partners Hyundai and MinterEllison and we acknowledge the valued support of all our corporate partners who help make our work possible.
